

Erika Hoffmann-Dilloway, a linguistic anthropologist, earned her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan in 2008. She is currently an Associate Professor of Anthropology at Oberlin College. Her research focuses on semiotics, language ideologies, and language socialization. The two primary ethnographic sites in which she locates her research include d/Deaf social networks in Nepal and emerging transnational sign language literacy practices using SignWriting. She has published articles based on this research in a range of anthropology and linguistics journals and is currently working on two books drawing on each project.
